Total) Registered Voters

AMERICA'S HEALTHCARE CRISIS

1,000 registered voters nationwide were surveyed on healthcare issues.

Democrats currently have the advantage on healthcare issues.

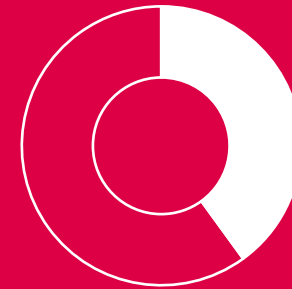

Specifically on issues like lowering premiums and drug costs.

60% say Republicans do not have a clear plan for healthcare reform.

KEY FINDING

Healthcare remains a top concern for voters

40% ranked it a top or top 3 issue

WHAT AILS THE SYSTEM?

62% say they're not getting adequate value for their health insurance costs and coverage.

Seniors and those managing healthcare decisions are most concerned about overall costs.

KEY FINDING

Affordability is a major concern.

THE INFLATION REDUCTION ACT

KEY FINDING

The Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) faces significant skepticism from the American public regarding its efficacy in reducing healthcare costs and inflation.

Vast majorities of Republicans, Independents, Seniors, and Suburban voters say costs have skyrocketed for everyday essentials, energy, and health insurance since the IRA was signed into law.

80%

say grocery costs have increased since the IRA was passed.

60%

say the IRA has increased health insurance costs.

THE INFLATION REDUCTION ACT (CONT.)

Majority blame "government involvement" and "insurance companies" for cost increases.

More than two-thirds of respondents were less likely to support the IRA when they learned that it cut Medicare by nearly $300 billion to fund Democrat priorities like healthcare for illegal migrants, subsidies for big health insurers, and tax credits for electric vehicles.

Voters say the IRA helped the government and politicians – not consumers.

SOLUTIONS VOTERS WANT

KEY FINDING

Voters want decisive action on healthcare costs and drug pricing.

Most agree that market-based solutions to lower drug prices and simplify cost reduction are best.

86% agree that all price discounts negotiated between drug manufacturers and insurance companies should get passed along directly to patients at the pharmacy counter instead of being pocketed by PBM middlemen (often owned by big insurers).

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR THE GOP

The data underscores a resounding mandate from voters, transcending demographic divides, for congressional candidates to prioritize specific actions in healthcare reform.

KEY FINDING

Voters want to see specific actions when it comes to healthcare reform.

Voters are deeply concerned about healthcare costs and a lack of clear solutions.

Republicans have an opportunity to gain voter trust by proposing patient-centered reforms that address affordability and empower patients.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR THE GOP (CONT.)

A massive 79% majority supports candidates advocating for healthcare decisions to remain between patients and their doctors, free from undue government intrusion.

A substantial 75% majority of voters prioritize candidates who pledge to enhance Congressional scrutiny of health insurers and Pharmacy Benefit Managers.
